Joyce was born on January 1, 1938 in Oakland, Nebraska to the late Linde and Sophia (Lohmeyer) Nelson. She grew up in Oakland and attended rural District 67 until she reached high school, graduating from Oakland High School in 1955. Joyce attended Wayne State for several summer school sessions, earning her certification to teach in rural schools, which she did for five years. Joyce married Robert Popken at Elim Lutheran Church, Hooper, Nebraska, on May 25, 1958. She and Robert farmed near Uehling, Nebraska for several years, eventually moving to Swanville in February, 1973. Joyce lived and worked on the farm the remainder of her life. She was a devoted wife to her beloved Bob. Taking long walks in the pasture was a special pleasure for Joyce. She liked searching for and enjoying spring flowers and the brilliance of fall colors. Eventually, Joyce found an artistic outlet in making and painting ceramic figures. Her specialty was ornaments. She sold them at craft shows, but her favorite pleasure was giving them to special people she remembered year after year. She enjoyed her family, those near and at a distance, her extended family, and the family she created by investing in her neighbors and friends. Joyce was a strong believer in our Lord Jesus Christ and is now at peace with Him in eternity. She was an active member of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Ladies Aid, Dove Homemakers, and Northern States South Devon Association.

Joyce is survived by her husband, Robert; sons, Ryan (Sonya) Popken, Hawkinsville, GA, and Joel Popken, Swanville; grandchildren, Maggie, RYanne and Joseph Robert Popken; brothers, Jim (Judy) Nelson of Oakland, NE, Richard (Phyllis) Nelson of Topeka, KS, and Don (Bonita) Nelson of Ord, NE.

Joyce was preceded in death by her parents, Linde and Sophia Nelson, and her brothers, Kenny Nelson and John Nelson.

“ Joyce was such a loving woman that will be dearly miss. From the Christmas ornaments that we looked forward to getting each year, Christmas Cheer after Christmas Eve service, gatherings at the farm, stories of her watching me as a child or her tell Haley all about me before we were married and how much I loved children and always had to hold babies. Be at peace with our Lord Joyce we will meet again. Bob, Joel, and Ryan our prayers are with you for comfort and strength during this difficult time.

“ Our deepest sympathy to you Joel, your Dad and brother and his family. Your Mom was such a friendly person and always asked about our kids and even remembered their names, something I even struggled with at times. She always gave a wave when she drove by when we lived next to you. I am sure she will be greatly missed by many. Our thoughts and prayers are with your family.

“ Bob & Joel: thank you for the precious gift of letting me share in your family life two years ago. That week with Joyce and both of you was very special to me at the time, and remains special in my memories. There no words to offer for your loss, only to let you know we truly care. Phyllis and I aren't able to travel for the funeral, but we will be there in spirit. We love you, and will be watching from afar.

“ I remember Joyce:

The Joyce who decided not to gather the eggs after she encountered a skunk in the chicken house

The Joyce who survived having five brothers, even after they persuaded her to try to eat a caterpillar

The Joyce who often sent personal hand-made ornaments

The Joyce who loved to receive letters, even when I didn't write often

The Joyce who had thoughts of being a missionary, and shared that thought when I went to Africa, as a way of 'going with me'

The Joyce who had an English pen pal, and mistakenly asked the pen pal who she celebrated the Fourth of July

The Joyce who made baking soda biscuits, and let me test them out

The Joyce who shared an upstairs with several of the boys, even though she had a separate room; the stairs in her Minnesota home reminded me of our childhood stairs

The Joyce who checked my hairline at my Dad's funeral in 1975, to see if I was hiding a balding brow—still have coverage, but I'm starting a silver streak above the ears—as I entered church this morning I was thinking I'd have to show it to her—but I guess she's looking down at it now

This is the Joyce I spent a week with a few years ago, I think we both knew that could have been the last time we saw each other—that was the week that was, rather than the week that should have been

This is the Joyce that loved those that I loved, and let them know it, this is the Joyce that I love

This is the Joyce that encouraged my daughter, and shared the source of that encouragement, the strength that Joyce saw in Tammy

This is the Joyce that I would send John Deere calendars to in advance of her birthday, knowing that Bob really enjoyed them, and it would please Joyce to see his enjoyment

This is the Joyce who would tramp through the cornfields and beanfields with us, chopping down weeds, sharing cool water from a canvas bag

This is the Joyce who, with Mom, would bring us lunches and cool water

This is the Joyce who would call and ask how you are doing, this is the Joyce who would call and break the news when a sadness occurred

This is the Joyce who would let me know she appreciated the pictures I sent, when I should have been writing and calling

This is the Joyce who struggled to write and share of things on the farm, when she was dealing with her latest battle—you could see the pain in the lines of her letters, yet you could see the love, and the reaching out to me, to family, holding on to those she loved

I wondered how I could respond to those offered their condolences, or how I could answer 'how are you doing?' I know I will miss the ability to reach out to Joyce, the Joyce I seldom saw, yet could always call. She knew I loved her, and that I felt her love for me and mine

It is never too late to remember a friend, but it can be too late to let them know you care—dare to care!

With love,

Brother Richard
